A WONDERFUL HELP

At Two Stages of Life Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Mrs. Fairburn Strong And Well

Chattanooga, Tenn.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby came and I could no longer keep up. It strengthened my system and relieved me of the distressing effects of an overdeveloped and such things. It helped me wonderfully. This was my first experience with the Vegetable Compound. Years afterwards I took it during the Change of Life and got along so well I scarcely ever had to lie down during the day and seldom had dizzy fainting spells. I am now well and strong, can do all my housework with perfect ease and it is a comfort to me to be able to say to other suffering women, 'This Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine has been preeminent in my life. For forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been preeminent in success in controlling the diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.'

To Meet Midsummer Needs

AMONG all the charming frocks that have been made to meet the needs of midsummer, it would be hard to find one more excellent in every particular than the novel dress shown here. It begins by fulfilling its mission—which is to look beautifully cool. It is a handsome affair simply made, but embodying the latest word in smart styles. It is an original dress and it contrives to be informal enough to prove very useful. One can hardly imagine an occasion where this frock would seem out of place. It will lend itself to all sorts of summer back grounds.

French blue and white pongee with embroidery in white blue and black has been handled with consummate skill in the construction. White predominates in the skirt which takes advantage of the vogue for accordion plaiting and is made with four panels of blue set in it. The texture of pongee all over that of georgette gives the best effects in accordion plaiting. The lines are sharp and rigid than in plain materials.

The skirt is perfectly straight, with three inch hem at the bottom and a narrow belt.

Blue pongee is used for the blouse and it is cut with short kimono sleeves and arranged to allow for a little drapery about the waist. At each side is a row of five silk covered buttons. A little fold of pongee finishes the neck and sleeves and the bottom of the blouse. Above this in effective pattern is embroidered with some blue and a little black interwoven in a design of solid lines in white.

A hat of white broad veiled with georgette canvas shoes with low heels plain silk stockings bear out the formal character of the dress. The personal of white silk with black markings and black handkerchiefs as a costume in which there is nothing that might be improved upon.

THE PARAMOUNT

CLOVER'S REBELLION—With Ann, Stewart in the leading role and the first episode of The Lost City, a new series of attractions.

A comedy with a melodramatic twist describes Clover's Rebellion. It is the type of comedy that has been so successful on Broadway for the past two seasons and develops into an absorbing mystery before the final close out. The mystery baffles the spectator although the plot that killed the duke is laid in full view of the audience and every person that had access to the revolver is accounted for at all times. The average person is greatly surprised when the truth is revealed, for everyone points to everyone but the real culprit.

"The Lost City" in 15 sensational episodes is a wild animal picture of continuous thrill. Seventeen months time was necessary to prepare the serial. The approximate value of animals actually slain during production was $95,000. Junius Hanson, the well-known screen star, is seen in the leading role.

THE SOISSON

"THE HEART OF A CHILD"—With Nastasia, the incomparable star, in a moving human romance of Limerhouse. London theatrical life and British aristocracy is a big attraction today. Later her beauty attracts attention and by an odd chain of circumstances Sally becomes a model in a fashionable modiste's shop. There she meets Lord Kidderminster who, attracted by her face and her winsomeness, helps finance a revue in which Sally has the principal role. The girl proves a hit. Lord Kid-

THE BEST ADVICE FOR MOTHERS

WILKES BARR, PA. About thirty years ago I had my first experience with Dr. Pierce's medicine. After motherhood my health failed. I did not get any help in any medicine I took. At last I saw the Favorite Prescription advertised and decided to give it a trial, and it completely built me up in health and strength. Since that time I have always taken "Favorite Prescription" when in need of a tonic, and I always found it very beneficial and consider it the very best woman's medicine there is. Mrs. M. A. KERR, 70 Myndell St. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy that any ailing woman can safely take, because it is prepared from roots, does not contain alcohol or narcotics. Its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send ten cents for trial package of "Favorite Prescription Tablets" to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or write for advice.

Trolley Freight Service.

The establishment of a trolley freight and express service by the West Penn trolley company is a very effective means of improving the distribution of merchandise and commodities throughout the territory served. Shippers have long suffered the inconvenience and delays incident to freight and express transportation by the railroads. They will therefore welcome a service which promises to provide promptness at a relatively low cost.

It will be of particular advantage to Conneltsville merchants and their patrons. Equipped as the city is with the leading establishments in all lines in the county a distribution service of the character planned by the West Penn will enlarge the territory tributary to Conneltsville as a buying center. Patrons will be enabled to make purchases of bulky articles and have them delivered with the least possible inconvenience and without waste of time in waiting for the often slow movement by express or freight.

This new service should be an incentive for people in the Conneltsville buying district to make their purchases here instead of going elsewhere and to the manifest disadvantage of the local establishments. It will help to build up and enlarge our own enterprises and add to the importance of Conneltsville as a distributing center. Similar service elsewhere has been a decided success and has grown in popularity. That the same conditions will result from its inauguration in the coke region there can be no reasonable doubt.

The Legion and the Bergdoll Case.

The action of the American Legion at the state cantonment, in demanding rigorous action by the War Department in placing the responsibility for the escape of draft dodger Bergdoll, and the punishment of those found guilty of any complicity in the act, has been a most commendable one. The action of Secretary Baker in the obligation to clear himself and his department of the ignominy this incident has placed upon him.

"If," says the Pittsburgh Gazette Times, "Secretary Baker endorsed the permit for Bergdoll's search for the pot of gold at the rainbow's end, as is alleged, he is entirely too credulous for the position he holds. Since the War Department head has not little explained his connection with the case, the question propounded by the Legion gives him an opportunity to do so in a way that he cannot well avoid 'coming clean.' If Baker had no part in the release of Bergdoll, he owes it to the public to exonerate himself. At least it is to be hoped that the action of the Pennsylvania members of the American Legion will cause the truth to be revealed and that those who assisted in the escape either through their lack of precaution or by wilful act may suffer proper punishment. The higher up the responsibility lies the greater culpability. Every man who gave loyal service to the government in the days of war has an interest in this case and the indignation that such feel over the way in which it has been handled is amply justified by the magnitude of the outrage."

The Legion is deserving of the thanks of every patriotic citizen for the demand it has made, which, if anything, was couched in milder terms than the circumstances justify. If the War Department does not heed the warning to act and act with determination, it is inactive in the case has already cast upon it.

CONSERVATISM VS. RADICALISM.
For President Wilson's impractical and un-American League of Nations the Republican platform substitutes a plain, simple and more conservative practical plan which is summarized in the declaration:

"The Republican party stands for government among the nations to preserve the peace of the world."

This, with the pledge which supplements the declaration constitutes the Republican platform. It is a platform of peace, of order, of stability, of progress, of the best of all possible worlds.

The Republican platform further declares that the coming Republican administration to such an agreement with the other nations of the world as will maintain the full duty of America to civilization and to humanity, in accordance with American ideals, and without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise the judgment and power in favor of peace.

party is now, and in which course it will be confirmed by the action of the San Francisco convention in approving Wilson's league plans, the Republican party and the country at large can calmly await the issue that will be involved in the approaching contest at the polls.

With the steady Democratic trend toward radicalism, socialism and internationalism, any further step in that direction will merely emphasize the soundness of the Republican position on the peace proposition. As time passes, and the difference between the parties are more sharply defined, it becomes more and more evident that the American public is coming to understand that the big issue of the campaign will be conservatism versus radicalism. The former is exemplified by the record principles and attitude of the Republican party; the latter by the doctrine and policies of Wilson which have been the most fruitful source of the dissatisfaction and unrest that has prevailed for several years.

Fortunately for our country the fact has been repeatedly demonstrated that the trouble making elements which have been incited to activity have not been able to secure any definite success or to get substantial public support for their movements. The Democratic party won't fare any better in its plan to fasten an European-made league of nations upon America.

With the date of the Pick Veterans' picnic definitely fixed we know that the weather men will be all presently have some real summer weather.

Nothing is quite so raw as a November day in June.

How self-mortifying Vice President Marshall has been as a public servant may be gathered from his admission that he "threw his hat for Bryan, played for Barker and done his hardest for Wilson."

The traffic officers at Brimstone corner Saturday night of the opinion that Crawford avenue was somewhat of a speedway itself when it came to controlling the movements of a car about every five or six seconds.

As a safety first nativity the raid on the police barracks in Ireland are second only to the raids on the bonded warehouse in the United States.

We have the promise of the almanac, that the performance of the weather man, to remind us that today is the first day of summer.

Denouncing Thrift

WASHINGTON, June 17.—In a recent bulletin relative to the manner in which the meat packing establishments of the country were built, the Federal Trade Commission says, in an apparent tone of criticism, that the several companies "have grown to these proportions principally from profits retained in the business after deducting dividends paid to stockholders." If this is intended as a criticism of the re-investment of profits in an extension of the business of meat packing, it is also inferentially a criticism of the practice of re-investment of profits in any business. If such is to be the policy of the Federal Trade Commission, it is difficult to imagine how large enterprises can be built up in this country without the builders coming under the condemnation of the government.

Every business, large or small, that has been established in America has been established out of the profits of business. The founder of the Woolworth five and ten cent stores began with no capital except his own energy; but by the severest economy he saved from his earnings, invested those earnings in business, saved the profits of the business, and re-invested them time after time until the Woolworth concern now owns the highest building in the United States and controls a chain of retail stores which are recognized as a great boon to the consuming public of the United States. Other concerns have adopted a similar policy in mercantile enterprise.

The only alternative open to the meat packers or to other men of enterprise is to waste their savings or cut their profit so that there shall be nothing to save. Imagine what the United States would be today if in all the history of American industry the policy had been pursued of cutting profits until there were no profits to save. Our railroads would not have been built, our mines would not have been developed, our oil wells would not have been drilled, immense factories would not have been constructed, large department stores and office buildings would not be in existence, there would be no steamships in our ocean carrying trade, we would still be in the primitive condition which existed in the days of colonial settlement.

If the meat packers have accumulated profits by dishonest or unscrupulous methods, that is a fit subject for criticism. There is much reason to doubt whether they have done so, however, for it is agreed that their methods are far more economical and have been of far greater benefit to the country than the wasteful and expensive methods previously pursued by the individual local slaughter houses that prepared meat for consumption. The methods of the West Penn and similar concerns have demonstrated by their success that they are superior, in some respects, at least, to those which they succeeded.

The fact that these two large branches of industry have been financially successful is not in itself an evidence of wrongful methods. The criticism of the Federal Trade Commission seems, therefore, to be a criticism of the practice of saving, and re-investing the savings in the business from which they were secured. In other words to be more successful than your competitor and retain and re-invest the rewards of success is reprehensible. This is a doctrine to which the American people will never subscribe.

TRY FOR IT.

If it's a goal worth the getting.
Try for it!
Don't seek to win it by fretting.
Try for it!
Get up and go for it.
Strike a hard blow for it.
Make a brave show for it—
Try for it!

Boy, if it's fortune you're after,
Try for it!
Don't be a beggar for laughter,
Try for it!
Don't sit and wait for it.
Battle with fate for it.
Dare to be great for it—
Try for it!

What if the hazards are many?
Try for it!
Wishing won't lighten them any.
Try for it!
Hustle and fight for it.
Work all your might for it.
Dare to be right for it—
Try for it!

If there's a goal that you long for,
Try for it!
That is why God made you strong for.
Try for it!
Don't merely pray for it.
Work hard to get it.
Be willing to pay for it—
Try for it!

Harding, a Typical American.

Pittsburgh Labor Board.

There is no denying the fact that Senator Warren C. Harding, the Republican nominee for the presidency, is a man of the people. He had a humble start in life and has honestly won his way to the front by merit and self-reliance. His ability to true and progressive principles, his love for his fellow-men, self-criticism, works in movements designed for the general uplift, his ability in gaining knowledge in all things aiming at the welfare of the nation and genuine sympathy for the men who toil for wages, Senator Harding is a true and typical American.

TROTTER AND LEISENRING TO MEET JUNE 25 AT TROTTER

Agreement Made That Neither "Load Up" For the Clash.

BAPTISTS TO STAGE GAME

The followers of the Trotter baseball team will be overjoyed to learn that their favorite team has at last secured the consent of Leisenring No. 1 team to meet them in a tussle on June 25. Trotter has been after this game ever since the opening of the season. Both teams agreed not to "load up." This means that they will not have any players other than have been playing on the teams during the season. The game will be played on Leisenring field. Great rivalry exists between the two teams and the game is expected to draw a capacity crowd.

Connellsville is not without its "church baseball" team. The Baptist church has a team in the Baracca class who promise to do great things on the diamond. The following players will meet the Mt. Run church team on July 5: Hicks, catcher; Hanger, first base; Stillwagon, pitcher; Weather, second base; Grimm, left field; Bryner, catcher; Herbert, right field. This will be the first game these "youngsters" will have engaged in this season and they promise to put up a good "article" of ball.

The Connellsville Independents will come to bat next Saturday with the Mt. Run team of Pittsburgh. This is the game that will undoubtedly see Fayette Field.

MAINSRING OF TEAM IS BRAINY RECEIVER

Managers Place Too Much Importance on Pitching.

Catcher Corresponds to Quarterback on Football Team, Says Larry Lajole—in Best Position to Get Information.

Although he is out of baseball, Larry Lajole, former star batsman of the American league, is having a lot of fun watching the major league hurlers trying to out the freak delivery, or per orders of the powers at their big season early this year. Lajole has not been heard to speak his mind on the matter directly, but he did state recently that major league managers placed entirely too much importance on pitching and not enough on the catching department.

"The big Freshman may be waste to be thoroughly understood as being in favor of first-class pitching. But the catcher is the real mainspring of any ball club, after all," said Larry. "because he corresponds to the quarterback back on a football team."

Lajole was in a reminiscent mood. He recalled some of the wonderful pitching accomplishments of Cy Young, and then asked how many of these wonderful games Cy would have annexed had it not been for the work of Chief Zimmer and O'Connor. Both of these receivers were of the brainy type, and not infrequently made it possible for Young to work out of a hole by the exercise of a little strategy at the plate.

"I know pitchers must have something or they can't get by," quoth Larry. "but I also contend that many hurlers branded mediocre can also be by with a creditable average if the man catching them is onto his business and gives them the help that lies within his power to give them."

According to Lajole, the catcher has the best opportunity to get information on the batter. Not only can he get information on the man at bat, but he can communicate with the pitcher through a code of signals. Larry says he would like to have an expression from some of the star fingers of a few years back. "I never sought their opinion on this matter," he declared, "but I would be willing to lay a little bet that everyone of them will give their catcher a lot of credit for their success." Lajole predicts the umpires will become more disgusted with the rules against freak pitching than the pitchers themselves, because the indicator handlers will be obliged to watch every move of the mound man. "Wonder what will be next?" asked the veteran as the discussion drew to a close.

The Man Who Wasn't Himself

"Indeed? It is now, you can't say you can shut the door at this stage of the game," scoffed Bemm. "A man in your situation might be expected to catch at him. Perhaps your head really is added. I'll give you the benefit of the doubt."

"Thanks," said Clinton. "It is not added, you certainly are a cool one," replied Bemm. "Don't you realize what a hole you are in over those hands? Admitting for the sake of the argument that you remember nothing about them, I will explain that I am enough of a man to do to you through."

"Most kind of you to tell me, Mr. Bemm."

Bemm's gray-brown eyes lost their deceptive softness. Clinton looked into their depths and saw the man behind the facade. His steady gaze struck him instead of being deflected. Bemm's voice was very soft.

"You see, old man, it is still a matter between friends. All you need do is to find the bonds, or their equivalent in money. If they have been disposed of, Doctor Kirkland believes you were irresponsible. If you have used any of the—proceeds, there's no doubt he will advance you the amount. If that is done—the bank released—know—the bank will accept his theory of your mental condition, and will allow the matter to be buried up. This is provided I forget certain facts that, if recalled by me, would knock the doctor's hypothesis into a cocked hat."

"Do you remember certain facts?" murmured Clinton.

"My dear Will, let me say that I do not remember them. One may easily forget where a friend is coming. All I ask is that you, in turn, show your friendship by intimating the situation to Am—Miss Lowrie. Nothing new, I know. Just a hint. She admits that she likes me, and you know how she is. A word from you in my favor, and she would at once—"

For all his guilefulness, Bemm was not quick enough to elude the hand that shot out to clutch his collar. He pulled back to free himself. In the same instant Clinton rose over him, white with anger. Without a word, Clinton jerked him to his feet, whirled him around, and rushed him to the head of the porch steps. Clinton's shoe smacked his right down the steps.

The audacity even more than the suddenness of the attack had paralyzed Bemm's power of resistance. The "Drop that hand," ordered Clinton. "spell was broken by the shock of his landing on the hard cement walk at the foot of the steps. He scrambled to his feet, his face contorted with fury. He put his hand to his hip."

"Drop that hand," ordered Clinton. "a foot barely above a whisper. Bemm's furious glance fell before the look in Clinton's eyes. His hand slipped down, away from the hip-pocket. Clinton descended a step, and spoke in the same low-pitched tone: "You blackmailer—you cur! Get out of here!"

Agonized Bemm tried to face the other's look, and again his glance wavered and fell. He turned and walked hurriedly down to the curb. The tires of his big car tore bites in the street surface, so violently did he throw on the full power of the engine.

A girlish exclamation caused the tense watcher to look about. Amy stood in the doorway, staring after the swift-flying car.

"Why, it's Charlie!" she cried. "Whatever is the matter?—Oh! Will you look! You look as if—as if—the hand herself at him."

He sprang to meet and sweep her up into the house.

"No—not out here!" he muttered. "Private, where none can see or hear—still he comes back—The cur! the cursed cur!"

"Buck! hush, dear!" urged the girl, putting up a hand over his mouth. "Oh, Will!" cried Ellen in the entrance of the drawing room. "You were!"

"The accident! The—the—" Clinton choked with wrath.

Between them, the girls hurried him into a secluded room where he could not be heard. There he found voice; but the words that burst forth were so incoherent with rage that neither girl could understand what he said. Overcome with dread of his wild outburst, Ellen fled to tell her mother that he had become violently insane.

Mrs. Kirkland hastened to telephone the ominous news to her husband. As soon as she received his promise to at once come home, she started to the rescue of Amy, timely followed by Ellen. With a resolution that by contrast emphasized her moral courage, the lady opened the door of the room in which Ellen had left the rascal.

No sound came from within. Her pale face increased. Shuddering with dread of what might be within, she rushed into the room. Ellen followed, still more fearful of what they might find.

Clinton was reclining in the depths of a big "sleepy-hollow" chair, as peaceful and still as if asleep. Amy, perched on the arm of the chair, was stroking his forehead and closed eyes. She looked about at the intruders and touched her lips for silence. But her patient had opened his eyes. At sight of the frightened ladies, he captured Amy's hand and sat up in the chair, his face red with embarrassment.

"Oh keep your seat! Do not disturb yourself! Be calm!" urged Mrs. Kirkland.

Amy freed an arm and slipped it about his neck. "You are calm now. Aren't you, dear?" she soothed.

"Yes—yes, of course," murmured Clinton, but his color deepened. "But, dearest," murmured Ellen, "you must be dizzy. You look so queer."

Clinton's expression became still more peculiar. His features were convulsed. He wriggled his hands. "This—this—" he gasped. "Whatever I—I don't you—Chocolate Soldier?"

They looked at one another in acute alarm. There now could be no doubt as to his condition. He sought to explain: "The—the opera."

"Opera?" repeated Amy. "Oh, yes—yes, we understand, dear. You are reminded of that opera, when the hero comes into the castle and the ladies make such a fuss of him. Yes, dear, we understand. So now hush and be quiet."

But instead of obeying, he flung himself back in the chair and burst into a roar of laughter. The outburst was far more violent than the first. It did not end until he lay helpless from spent emotion, tears rolling down his cheeks, and his hands, feebly beating the arms of the chair. Mrs. Kirkland hovered over him, ready with the bottle of lavender salts. On either side of him knelt Amy and Ellen, each with her arm about his neck, her head against his shoulder, and a hand stroking his face.

"Save—save the pieces!" he panted. The girls redoubled their tender caresses. Mrs. Kirkland held her bottle under his nose. He took a whiff, and groaned. "Alas! Who shall deliver me out of the hands of mine—my friends?"

They exchanged anxious glances, and Mrs. Kirkland whispered: "Hysteria!"

He pulled himself together, caught the girls' hands and his breath, and remarked in a conversational tone: "My dear Mrs. Kirkland, will you consider it hysterical if I observe that a cup of tea—"

"He's coming to himself!" shrieked Ellen.

"He has come to himself!" shrieked Amy.

Ellen flung herself upon his breast. He averted his head to ward off her lips, and Amy blew a kiss down the back of his neck.

Mrs. Kirkland observed his crimsoning face, and came to his rescue. "Girls, girls, that will do. He must not be agitated. If he is hungry—"

"If I see if luncheon is served," exclaimed Amy, and she darted from the room.

Clinton rose and transferred Ellen's arm from his neck to his elbow. "At least, I still retain my normal appetite," he observed.

"That is a great deal, dear boy," said Mrs. Kirkland. "It shows that you have fully regained your physical health. A little psychological treatment will soon restore your mental balance, as well."

When a few minutes later, Doctor Kirkland came in upon them at the luncheon table, the four were conversing as gaily as if none had ever heard of doubt and apprehension. The physician entered briskly, nodded to all in his genial manner, and explained his presence with a casual: "On my way to the sanitarium. Thought I'd stop by for a bite of lunch. My don't ask the girls and Will to excuse us."

Mrs. Kirkland followed him from the room with an air of composure that vanished the moment he closed the door behind her.

"Karl, you must do something—at once," she urged. "He is worse, far worse."

"Appears to me to be quite rational," replied her husband.

"Since he came in to luncheon—yes. But before that—such queer behavior, laughter, hysteria—after the mad rage that a frightened Ellen."

"H'm. This makes it doubly necessary. His attack on Bemm—"

"Charlie—he attacked Charlie?"

"Yes. I had a telephone call from police headquarters just as I was leaving the office. Couldn't quite make it out. But I gather that Bemm was indiscreet—Will had so angered him that he complained to our official friend. I was told that Will should be confined. I agreed."

"To send him to jail—you agreed to that?" protested Mrs. Kirkland, horrified.

"Our official friend may have understated it that way."

"Ah—But you?"

"In the sanitarium he will be even safer than in jail, and will receive the treatment so necessary for his recovery," explained her husband. "If I can report that he is there under guard, I believe the bank will accept my argument that it is to their interest for him to remain."

The little housemaid appeared in the doorway. "Excuse me, ma'm. Here's a telegram."

Doctor Kirkland had the yellow envelope open in a twinkling. He waved the maid out, with a incoherent "no answer"—and read the message to his wife: "Patient escaped night of sixteenth. Followed by superintendent. All trace lost in Chicago. Has he returned home?"

Mrs. Kirkland glanced about at the door behind her. "Then there is absolutely no doubt now," she said. "You know, he has been so positive; and at times it has seemed to me there are real differences. But after this—"

"Yes," agreed her husband. "Now that this proves we were not mistaken, I confess there have been several times when, had it not been for my knowledge of dual personality, I might have doubted. Truly the changes superinduced by dissociation are marvelous! In his real self, Will is absolutely honorable, straightforward, honest. Yet it is evident he secreted the bonds, sold or obtained a loan on them, and deposited the money in Chicago. I have it from Bemm. He has information from a friend in the bank."

"You cannot mean that Will actually—look the bonds?"

"Not knowingly. Evidently, in his dazed condition when the change of personality occurred, his first and only idea with regard to the bonds was to raise money on them and take a trip to California."

"You are so profound, Karl! Your deductive logic is simply wonderful!"

"Hardly that, my dear. These cases are simple, when one has the facts. The difficulty is to induce him to—Ah! I have it—that case of hyperaesthesia. The girls know her."

"You mean Annie Scarle? It is hardly more than a speaking acquaintance."

"That is quite sufficient. Come." He returned to the luncheon table, brisk, genial, and domineering. "What still at it? Sweetheart, there's a friend of yours at the sanitarium. You remember Annie Scarle. She has asked for you. Might do her good to see you."

"Poor Annie!" responded Amy with ready sympathy. "If I can cheer her up—"

"But to leave Will—"

"We might all go," suggested Mrs. Kirkland.

"Clap on your hats, girls, and you also, my dear, while I take my milk and a sandwich," directed the physician.

CHAPTER XI.

Caged.

As Mrs. Kirkland chose the seat beside her husband, Clinton was required to make one of the three in the room, and the girls saw to it that he sat between them.

The visitors were shown into a refreshingly cool waiting room, and the ladies sent up their cards to the patient they had come to see. Presently a pleasant young nurse, with the dress and manners of a social secretary, came down to say that Miss Scarle was at home and would be delighted to see Miss Lowrie.

"Only me?" exclaimed Amy.

The nurse looked at Doctor Kirkland. He considered, and spoke to his wife: "Amy alone may prove too exciting for her. She needs the quieting influence of yourself and Ellen. Go to her door and pretend to take leave of Amy. When she sees you are not coming in, she will insist that you make her a call."

"But Will, papa?" objected Ellen. "You have to visit your patients. He may find it tedious waiting here alone."

"If I shall show him alone, he will enjoy looking over the institution. I will plied the physician with his usual docility."

Mrs. Kirkland had at once started to accompany the nurse. The girls reluctantly followed her. Doctor Kirkland led Clinton away in the opposite direction. After conducting him through the offices, he took him up to the enclosed roof garden, where several vivacious, fashionably dressed persons were strolling about in the bright sunshine, each in company with a melancholy companion. The situation required no explanation.

On the second floor Dr. Kirkland led him into an unoccupied room facing the side street. It had a private bath and was otherwise furnished with conveniences to satisfy the most fastidious tastes. The physician closed the door and signed to Clinton to sit down. From above came a faint, almost inaudible sound.

"That is a patient in the room above," he explained. "She is shrieking in an hysterical paroxysm. I told you our walls are sound proof. That is not absolutely the case, as you hear."

"But, virtually so," said Clinton. "One never would imagine that a woman is screaming less than ten feet away."

"There is a special manner of deadening the walls and windows," explained the physician. "Otherwise we could not keep our super-sensitive patients in the same building with those subject to noisy outbursts. Our arrangements are so perfect that many persons come here simply for relaxation and quiet. This room is one reserved for the use of such guests. I can hardly call them patients."

"It is an ideal room," remarked Clinton.

The physician beamed upon him. "I'm glad to hear you say that, my boy. What do you say to taking it yourself for a few days?"

"Why not? You could keep secluded, and escape all this annoyance over your identity. Am I right in assuming that even the attentions of the girls are not altogether agreeable to you?"

"I am not so sure as to that," replied Clinton. "I cannot say that I have found it so very unpleasant being with my sister."

Is your time worth 10 cents an hour?

"I would like to send my washing to the laundry but I can not afford it."

In the days before women caught the larger vision of their role in life, this used to be said often. Women never thought of their time as having a money value. But it is different today. Women now know that their time is worth something.

Usually it requires from 10 to 15 hours to complete the family washing. If you value your time at only 10 cents an hour, you spend from $1.00 to $1.50 worth of it on your family washing. And if you value your time at 20 cents an hour—which certainly wouldn't be excessive, you spend from $2.00 to $3.00 worth of it on washday. This does not include other costs like wear on yourself and soaps, powders and fuel.

Why continue this wastage of self? Ours is an economical, cloth-saving laundry method. A plant, airy and bright with sunshine. Employees healthy and capable. Soft water and fluffy suds for your clothes. Ironing in a modern, steam-heated way that gives a beautiful, glossy finish to your things.

If washday has vexed you in the past, gain freedom in the future by sending your family bundle to us.

Double Stamps on $98.75 equal single stamps on $179.50 with a purchasing power—when books are full—of $4.00 on every $100 or of $7.15, which represents just that much more savings on the suit, leaving an actual cost of $81.57, which brings it almost to HALF PRICE.

Double Stamps will not be allowed on purchases paid for with Gold Bond Certificates, but there is no law against buying just as heavily with certificates as you can and now in the time to make them buy one-fourth to twice as much as usual.
